Prospectus.]

FOR some years the Clerk to the House has been collecting and arranging all available information which throws light on the history of the House since its institution in 1605 to the present time.

In the course of his investigations amongst the older documents, he has had to refer so constantly to the First Minute Book of the House that he has made a complete transcription of it.

This Minute Book covers the period from 1605, when the House was instituted by the Letter of Guildry, to 1678—six years after its constitution had been ratified by the Scots Parliament.

The book is in fair preservation, and the handwriting is, on the whole, wonderfully clear, but as the writing is in the style of the period, the book is quite unintelligible to the ordinary reader. The Records it contains are of great value in relation not only to the history of the Trades and the Convenery of Glasgow, but also to the general history of the city at a most interesting period of its progress. We think it right, therefore, that the Minute Book should now be published, so that these early Records of the business and procedure of the Trades and the House might be preserved in permanent form, and might also be available for popular use.

Under the auspices of the House, this would require to be done by private subscription, and we hope that a ready response will be given by all interested in the history of the House and of the city.

We propose that the Records should be printed in one quarto volume, and that the subscription should be £1 1s.—the edition to be limited to 500 copies, each copy to be numbered and a register kept of its issue, and the names of subscribers to be printed in and form part of the volume.

Preface.

SOME years ago I was desired by the Deacon Convener and the Representatives of the Trades House to re-write the History of the House. Two histories had already been published. The first, by Mr. Benjamin Mathie, writer (Clerk to the House, 1795-1831), was more of the nature of a hand-book or guide. It was written and published in 1819, and a revised edition was issued in 1827. Much of it became obsolete under the effects of the Burgh Reform Act of 1833,* and of the Act for the abolition of exclusive privileges of trading in 1846.† The second, by Mr. George Crawfurd, writer (Clerk to the House, 1831-1875), was published in 1858. Copies of this book are still plentiful. It is most interesting to general readers, and gives a reliable epitome of the rise and progress of the House. Notwithstanding the limited data upon which Mr. Crawfurd had to work, his "Sketch of the Trades House," so far as it goes, is capable of little improvement. It is open to amplification rather than to correction.

Since 1858, however, much historical material has been published which throws light on the growth of the craft and guild systems in Glasgow, notably the Records of the Convention of Royal Burghs, the Glasgow Burgh Records and Charters, the "View of the Merchants House," and histories or sketches relating to no fewer than twelve of the fourteen incorporated trades.

To draw from such sources a series of notes that would be of service in compiling a more complete history than either of the two older works, was of itself a considerable task. But besides this there were some hundreds of old documents belonging to the House to inventory and synopsise, and twenty large volumes of manuscript records from 1605 to the present day to peruse and abstract from. Proper and accurate use of the first Minute Book was found impracticable without making a complete transcription of its contents. All this work took up the leisure of more than five years.

It was then thought that apart from an extended History of the House, which would obviously involve still further research, a beginning might be made with the publication of the first volume of the Records in a form similar to that of many Scottish historical collections. This, it was hoped, would be of service to others than those interested merely in Craft and Guild affairs. Further, the publication of the present volume might have the result of initiating a series of Craft and Guild Records.

The reader hardly requires to be reminded that the Records in this volume are not those of a single Craft nor of the Guildry (which in Glasgow was composed of two ranks of Merchants and Craftsmen Burgesses), but are those of the Deacon Convener's Council. This Council consisted of the Deacons of all the Crafts (which included the Surgeons, now disassociated, and the Mariners, now extinct), with a certain number of colleagues supporting each Deacon. The Council owed its existence in Glasgow to the Letter of Guildry of 1605.*

In Royal Burghs, the Council or Court of Deacons, often called the Convenery, would appear to have been representative of a mere voluntary federation of the Crafts, without written constitution or legal sanction, and with a Deacon Convener, who was the creation of the Deacons alone.† On the one hand it was a convenient court of arbitration for settling craft disputes ; on the other it was a foil to the merchants, who were usually found united under the Dean of Guild in one compact body with legal status, viz., the Guild.

Glasgow was not a Royal Burgh, but a Burgh of Barony and Regality. Prior to 1605, there was no Guild of Merchants and no Convenery of Trades. But there were isolated craft associations, most of them legally recognised with Charters and Seals of Cause. The Letter of Guildry constituted a guildry for the first time in Glasgow, but not simply and solely a Merchant Guild. The Glasgow Guildry was to consist of the two ranks of Merchants and Craftsmen Burgesses, the former headed by a Dean of Guild, the latter by a Deacon Convener. Both ranks were brought together under the Presidency of the Dean of Guild in a Dean of Guild Court of eight lyners, four from each rank.

The Crafts, while thus consolidated, continued to maintain their separate existence and to manage their affairs by means of their Deacons and Master Courts.

The Deacon Convener's Council was intended to form a representative chamber of the leading men of each Craft. Its functions were, amongst others, to endeavour to settle differences between the Crafts or in the Crafts, without recourse to law, and to manage a joint undertaking for behoof of poor Craftsmen, viz., the Crafts Hospital. These were its private functions. Its public functions, in relation to the Town Council and the community generally, increased as the years went on.

* Appendix I. † See Bankton's Institutes, II., p. 578, par. 5.

The Records, now published for the first time, show the early transactions of the Council, which, it should be noted, did not assume the name of the Crafts House or Trades House until it had been in operation for more than 50 years. It was never officially called the Convenery.

The Records are given verbatim. Nothing has been omitted, and no liberties have been taken with the text. For any difficulty which the reader may experience with seventeenth century spelling, words, and phrases, I, along with my predecessors of the time, must take full responsibility, but offer no apology.

It is but right to say that about one-sixth of the book in the form of extracts had already been transcribed by Mr. Robert Renwick, Depute Town Clerk, in the year 1889, for the late Mr. Edmond Baird Paterson, afterwards Collector of the House. These extracts were exceedingly valuable for reference and comparison, but no further use has been made of them in connection with the present publication.

The documents in the Appendices have all been carefully collated with the originals, with the exception of the letter from King James VI.,* which could not be obtained for reference.

Thanks are due to Mr. Robert Renwick for help afforded in many ways; also to Dr. George Neilson, Stipendiary Magistrate; and to the Incorporations of Maltmen, Weavers, and Bonnetmakers and Dyers, for permission to collate their copies of the Letter of Guildry with the original extract from the Burgh Records in possession of the House.

I must also record my sincere thanks to Mr. A. R. Duncan, M.A., for his able assistance and co-operation during the past three years.

HARRY LUMSDEN.

IRVINE, March, 1910.

Note.—The second volume of the Records, 1678-1713, has been amissing since some time before 1831. Any information which may lead to the recovery of this volume will be much prized by the House.

Directions to Readers.

THE written letters throughout the book represent the same letters as are in use now. It is extremely doubtful whether the two additional ancient characters þ and ȝ were ever intended to be written by the different scribes. The Alphabet.

The former letter þ known as the thorn, and representing th, may have been in the mind of some of the writers, but the single written letter found representing th is most undoubtedly a y and not þ. It has therefore been printed as y, e.g., ye = the, yat = that. þ.

The other character ȝ always takes the form of z, and has therefore been printed z throughout. It is invariably met with where our modern y would be used. For instance, at the beginning of a word :— ȝ.

zeiris for yeiris = years.	zog^{r} for yog^{r} = younger.
zit for yit = yet.	zaird for yaird = yard.

and in the middle of a word :—tailzeour for tailyeour = tailor.

The letters u, v, and w are often interchanged, one being written where we would now use the other, for instance :— U, V, and W.

V for U.

vnforgevin = unforgiven.	abvs for abus = abuse.
vnlaw = unlaw.	v^{r} for u^{r}, i.e., uther = other.
vpon = upon.	vmquhile = umquhile.
vsing = using.	vsual = usual.

U for V.

proueist for proveist = provost.	Dauid = David.
rp̄ue for rp̄ve = respective.	diuers = divers.
seuerall = several.	quhatsumeuer = whatsomever.

W for V or U.

wnto = unto.	serwe = serve.
woittis for voittis = votes.	wpone = upon.
werie for verie = very.	bwytis for buitis = bits.
fywe for fyve = five.	gewin = given.
pwir for puir = poor.	anwal for anual = annual.

The letter y will sometimes be found where we would now use i, e.g., Y for I.

poyndis for poindis = poinds.
syluer = silver.
buylding = building.

Transposition of letters.

The transposition of letters is somewhat common. For instance :—

brussar, brussorie = bursar, bursary.
brut, brughe = burgh.
monye = money.
exterordinari = extraordinary.
threttein, threttie = thirteen, thirty.
thrid = third.

Spelling.

As will be seen, the spelling throughout is very irregular. The same word will often be found spelt by one scribe in several different ways. This holds good not only with ordinary words, but with proper names, e.g., as, als, alse.

baileis, bailzeis, baillees = bailies.
brethren, breithrine, brethreen.
fines, fynes, fynnes.
guildry, gildry, gildrie.
muskets, muskattis, musquetts.
samen, samyne, samine, samynn = same.
silver, siluir, syluir.
tailor, tailyeour, tailzeor, tailzeour.
Fairie, Farie, Pharie.
Jafray, Jafra, Jamphray.
Merschall, Marschell, Marchell, Mershell.

Quh.

The reader will notice the constant use of quh to represent the modern wh, e.g., quha, wha = who.

quhais = whose.
quhill = while.
quhilk = which.
quhom = whom.
quhinger = whinger (sword).

Terminations

Terminations of nouns and verbs will at first cause a little trouble to the reader. In nouns the ending is represents the modern plural endings es and s, and also the possessive s, e.g., armis = arms.

houssis = houses.
Godis pleasour = God's pleasure.

In verbs is will be found for s ; it for ed ; and for ing ; and in or ine for en, thus :—

is for s—buikis, extendis.
it for ed—buikit, revisit, debursit, agit, askit.
and for ing—awand, reportand, makand.
in or ine for en—tackin, choysine.

Contractions.

Contractions are very numerous. The scribes indicate contractions by means of contraction signs, and of superiors.

Each scribe uses a variety of signs and of contractions. No attempt has been made to reproduce in print the different styles of written contraction signs. One uniform mark has been used by the printer, and it will be found only where a contraction sign has been made by the scribe. A word is often contracted without any contraction sign being used. Contraction signs.

A short stroke printed above a letter signifies that a letter (or letters) following has been omitted in the original, a contraction sign being left by the writer to denote the shortening of the word, e.g., cū for cum = come. Where a double consonant should appear in a word, the contraction sign may be found over the vowel preceding the consonant, or over the consonant itself as, e.g., sūma or suma̅ = summa ; hāmerman or hamerman = hammerman.

The contractions are for the most part quite regular, the letters most frequently omitted being, m, n, om, um, in, on, ar, air, er, ri ; as e.g., nūber = nu*m*ber ; cōvenar = co*n*venar ;

c̄mand = *com*mand ; memorand = memorand*um* ;
deīks = deik*in*s ; c̄forme = c*on*forme ;
p̄ticulars = p*ar*ticulars ; ȳto = y*air*to ;
p̄sonalie = p*er*sonalie ; w̄ttin = w*ri*ttin.

Sometimes, however, the contractions are irregular, syllables or letters being left out in the middle of a word or cut off from the end of it ; as e.g., magrates = mag*ist*rates ; priñll = prin*cipa*ll ;

rep̄ive = res*pect*ive ; caōr = ca*utio*ner ;
simplī = simpli*citer* ; not̄ = not*ary*.

Superiors are small letters placed above the line to signify contractions. This form of contraction is very common ; Superiors

(a) in certain words of one syllable, as e.g.,

no^{t} = nocht = not ; bur^{t} = burgh ; p^{t} = part ;
q^{a} = quha = who ; q^{ll} = while ; q^{n} = when ; q^{t} = what ; q^{r} = where ;
wry^{t} = wright ; smy^{t} = smith ; w^{t} = with ;
y^{m} = yem = them ; y^{n} = then ; y^{r} = there ; y^{s} = this ; y^{t} = that ;

(b) in words of more than one syllable, ending with the letters d, r, or t, as e.g.,

Ar^{d} = Archibald ; mer^{d} = merchand ;
Ed^{r} = Edinburgh ; m^{r} = master ; mess^{r} = messenger ;
Parlia^{t} = Parliament ; pay^{t} = payment ; rece^{t} = receivit.

It should be noted that just as a scribe often spells the same word in various ways, so he may contract the same word variously, e.g., umqll, umq̄ll, umq^{ll} = umquhill.

One of the scribes repeats a contraction for con as in conveiner and conform. The first letter is clearly a c and the second closely resembles Con.

a y. While the whole contraction approximates to the old sign ꝯ = con, the combination is more like cy. Where this contraction occurs, therefore, it has been printed cy, thus :—*cy*veiner for *con*veiner ; *cy*form for *con*form.

Other signs.

At a later date a period, and sometimes a stroke—/, are also used to denote a contraction, e.g.,

malt. for maltman.	Whit. for Whitsunday.
d. for deacon.	lib. for libra = pounds.
Tho. for Thomas.	v/ = umquhile.
	L/ = Lordship.

~ for tio.

The curved line, ~ represents tio, e.g.,

exonera~un for exoneration.	mortifica~un.
ca~uner or cau~ner.	voca~un.
supplica~un.	execu~un.

Rubrics.

In the rubrics, for the convenience of printing, missing letters have been filled in in italics. Many of the rubrics appear to have been written at a later date than the Minute, although, as a rule, not much later. They may have been written in by a succeeding scribe to simplify reference.

Scotch words.

The modern reader will have no difficulty in understanding many of the old words used, such as :—

adois = doings.
aithis for oathis = oaths.
aucht = eight.
aursycht = oversight.
bailzeis = bailies.
baxter = baker.
baythe = both.
beis = be.
brasin = brass.
buik = book.
buird = board.
but = without.
chuis and choyse = choose.
compt = account.
eftir = after.
fra = from.
fuird = ford.
gif = if.
haill = whole.
kist = chest.
litster = clothweaver. lytes = leets.

na = no.
nather = neither.
prenteis = apprentice.
puir = poor.
quhais = whose.
samyn = same.
schone = shoes.
sik = such.
sklaittis = slates.
subscryve = subscribe.
tain = taken.
wobster = weaver.
yir for thir = these.

Money and Numbers.

Unless where specially mentioned the figures in the cash columns and throughout the book represent Scots money. To reduce pounds, shillings, and pence to sterling money, one must divide by 12. The merk is equal to 13/4 Scots.

In the early part of the book the figures are usually expressed in Roman numerals. The pounds are preceded or followed by the contraction lib. or ℔, representing libræ = pounds. The shilling figures are followed by s., and the pence by d. It will be noticed that where the last Roman numeral is an i, it is extended downwards until it forms a j, thus :—viij = eight.

When ordinary numerals come to be used in the accounts, additional ciphers are found written before the numerals in each column. The pounds are usually written in not less than four figures, and the shillings and pence in not less than two figures each, thus :—

0008 06 08 for £8 6 8
0066 13 04 for £66 13 4

In a few accounts these ciphers have been printed in full as specimens. In the remainder the extra ciphers have been omitted.

The year will often be found expressed with the help of a corrupt contraction representing 1600, which should possibly have been written imvic, i.e., i (one), m (thousand), vi (six), c (hundred), but is written instead iaivic—or more commonly jajvjc or jajvic.

Brackets, etc.

Round brackets ( ) denote that there is a blank left in the original writing.

Square brackets [ ] denote that the original writing is undecipherable.

Square brackets [ ] with a word or words between, denote that the words have been supplied.

A series of.....denotes that the writing has been worn away, or the paper torn or amissing.

I.

Letter of Guildry.

[NOTE.—The original Letter of Guildry is not known to exist, and the Burgh Records for the period from which the extract must have been taken are now amissing. The only official extract known to be extant is that in possession of the Trades House and given hereafter. There are, however, various copies more or less authoritative.

(1) What bears to be a transcript of a notarial copy of the Letter of Guildry is engrossed in a minute book of the Incorporation of Bonnetmakers which contains the minutes of that craft from 21st September, 1611, to 19th September, 1718.

It was written into the minute book by Robert Brok, notary, then clerk of the incorporation, and is a copy of an extract from the Burgh Court books made by William Fleming, servitor to Archibald Heygait, town clerk, and certified by the latter's signature. The copy made from the extract is the first entry in the minute book of the incorporation. The next entry is a copy minute of the Trades House of date 15th May, 1611. The entry next following, being the first minute of the incorporation in the book, is dated 21st September, 1611. In every probability, therefore, this copy of the Letter of Guildry was written by Brok from Heygait's extract between 15th May and 21st September, 1611. In any case, it cannot have been copied into the book later than 1617, as Brok ceased to be clerk of the craft in that year. Whatever view of the probable date be taken, it is the oldest known copy of the Letter of Guildry.

The extract from which the copy was taken must have been issued prior to 3rd December, 1612, by which time Heygait, who certified the extract by his signature, had "deserted and left his place," as is recorded in the Dean of Guild Court books under that date.

(2) The next oldest so far as known is that in possession of the Incorporation of Weavers. It is in the handwriting of the middle seventeenth century, resembling closely the style of Wm. Yair and his assistants. Wm. Yair was clerk of the Trades House from 1630 to 1672. He was also clerk of the Incorporations of Hammermen, Weavers, and Maltmen, interim town clerk and town clerk of Glasgow during part of that period. The weavers' copy is stated in the initial title to be an extract of "ye Lettir of Gildrie insert and regrat in ye deikin conveinars buiks verbatim."

(3) There is bound up in the minute book of the Incorporation of Maltmen for the period commencing 22nd May, 1719, what bears to be a copy of an original extract from the Burgh and City of Glasgow Records. The source from which this copy was taken is not otherwise indicated.

(4) A copy of the Letter of Guildry appears in M'Ure's History of Glasgow. M'Ure does not state how he obtained the copy, but at the end of it, as printed in his work, are the words "Extractum est de libro actorum curiarum burgi de Glasgow 28vo Decembris anno 1694." M'Ure has undoubtedly taken great liberties with the original text, modernising many of the words to his own time, and substituting, for instance, "Wednesday" as the fair day instead of "Monday," and shortening clauses by paraphrasing. From the similarity between this copy and the copy contained in Crawfurd's Sketch of the Trades House, it would appear that Crawfurd took his copy direct from M'Ure. Crawfurd may not at the time have known of the existence of the original extract in the possession of the Trades House. The convener's box in which all old documents were then kept was not in the custody of the clerk of the House. At all events the differences between the original extract and Crawfurd's copy are so marked that it is most unlikely he had the original extract before him when appending his copy to the Sketch of the Trades House.

(5) Other copies are contained in Gibson's History of Glasgow published in 1777; in the View of the Merchants House of Glasgow, published in 1866; and in a Memorial for the Lord Provost, Magistrates, and Town Council of Glasgow relative to the claim by the dean of guild and his council to appoint the clerk and assessor of the Dean of Guild Court of Glasgow. The last-named copy, which was prepared under the guidance of the town clerk (in connection with the case The Dean of Guild v. the Magistrates and Town Council of Glasgow, 26th June, 1876), is taken from M'Ure's History and collated with Gibson's copy and with the copy in the View of the Merchants House.

What follows is a print verbatim of the official extract in possession of the Trades House. It has been collated with the weavers', the bonnetmakers', and the maltmen's copies, and also with M'Ure's copy.

The variations are shown in the foot notes: (a) words appearing in the other copies and not in the official extract have been inserted within square brackets; (b) words in the official extract, for which variations are shown in the foot notes, appear in italics. All variations have not been noted as very many are quite trivial and unworthy of record. (c) M'U., M'Ure; B., bonnetmakers' copy; M., maltmen's copy; W., weavers' copy.]
